Suggestions for Improvement:	Your science lesson was an investigation. By adding a journaling opportunity (or other medium) will help the students focus their learning. You employed many informal assessments during the lesson to make sure the students were with you.
Overall Rating:	Proficient
Suggestions for Improvement:	Even though I came in a bit late your learning objective was obvious. Great work. The rock shaking activity was a lot of fun. Moving the students to the front of the room and away from their experiments was a good idea. Suggestions: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> *This was high engagement and very fun, so when you talk make sure the students are not holding the materials. By doing this the students quickly learning that if they want to continue they need to be ready to listen to you. *Include a journal or another way to have the students take notes. They were making a lot of great observations, but need to be able to concretely connect their learning. * When the students were in the front of the room on the floor, move them to be in your line of site. There were a couple girls sitting closest to the board by you (but behind you) that were not paying attention. *When guiding them through the ice breaking the rock the students were very disengaged. Where they confused or off task? You needed to get to the video quicker. The video allowed all the students to realize what would happen, without guessing.
